Thank you Russell, Kevin,

I am just looping in S/Sgt Mike Graham our RCMP NCOic. I have reached out to our CTF partners (Hazmat, Tac Medics and FIS) just to advise that we don't have a specific request to be stood up in advance, but to remain situationally aware. In the event we are required reactively or proactively at the very least I have all the contact info for our partners that are on duty over the weekend so it should help make any response a little smoother.

We all completely understand that this is a very fluid situation at present, as always will be ready if required.

Cheers,
Mike

I would suggest you check with PPS as they may have some resources such as fire stages between West Block and the Supreme Court. Our current intent to keep emergency lanes available. The truckers have been cooperative but there are the fringe and tagalong elements that are creating the issues. Regardless, there will be significant traffic impacts across the city. NCRCC is being staffed and we will be monitoring routes and availability. I know the RCMP have a different series of risks arising from this event and any solution needs to be flexible for more than just the downtown core

Russell

Hi Andy , Kevin,

I know that there currently is not any deployment or preparatory plan in place for the trucker convoy at this time however I understand it could change depending on intell.

I know there are any number of possible concerns and the media are reporting some elements are looking to engage is similar behavior in Washington. My concern is that if the core and the Hill are going to be targeted if there is a need for a CBRNE response we may have no access to the core....like Canada Day.

If there is going to be a deployment in preparation for this event the more notice we get the better as it would likely be one involving fire hazmat, medics, ident and k9.

Thanks

Mike
